Had Enough of "Sport."

When the prince of Wales—later King Edward—visited India he took part in a tiger hunt, mounted on an elephant, with his gillie, Peter Robertson, behind him in the howdah. Suddenly a swarm of bees descended on them and stung both prince and gillie severely. Peter cried out in his agony, regardless of all rank: "What's the use o' stayin' here to be stinged to death by these beasts, a' for the sake o' a dirty tiger? Let's awa' and be oot o' it!"
